

Access to Justice

Free and Low Cost Legal Resources in Virginia

A guide for helping low- and modest-income Virginians
obtain legal services

Facts about the Justice Gap in Virginia

- The Justice Gap has been defined as the difference between the level of legal assistance available and the level that is necessary to meet the needs of poor Americans.
- Over 80 percent of the civil legal needs of the poor in Virginia and nationwide go unmet.
- Individuals who are represented by counsel are twice as likely to have a favorable outcome versus those who are unrepresented.
- One in eight Virginians (approximately one million Virginians) is eligible for free legal services from Virginia's legal aid programs; however, there are not enough legal aid lawyers to provide representation – fewer than 140 legal aid lawyers.
- There is one legal aid lawyer per 7,237 poor people in Virginia vs. one lawyer per 349 Virginians.

The Right to Counsel

The Sixth Amendment of the US Constitution guarantees the rights of criminal defendants, including the right “to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.” Although the US Supreme Court held in Gideon v. Wainwright (1963) that there is a constitutional right to court appointed counsel for indigent defendants in criminal proceedings, there is no right to a free lawyer for low- and modest-income parties in civil actions. Such actions include:

- securing or maintaining custody of their children,
- maintaining safe and habitable housing,
- obtaining protection from abusive relationships,
- securing access to critical health care, and
- receiving disability payments.

Lawyers are not required to do pro bono work. Unfortunately, too often litigants are forced to represent themselves.

Options for Legal Assistance by Counsel

1 Licensed Legal Aid Organizations

There are nine legal aid programs serving Virginia. These programs help low-income families and individuals maintain the basics of life: income, shelter, food, health care, education, and family stability and range in size from eight employees to eighty. Volunteer lawyers also assist these organizations through pro bono programs. Please contact your local legal aid office for more information about the services offered and types of cases handled. You may also call 1-866-LEGLAID (1-866-534-5243) to reach your local legal aid office.
